3. Approval of Agenda

Mr. Vallo moved to approve the agenda as presented, second by Ms. Weisman, motion carried by unanimous voice vote.

4. Approval of Minutes
a) December 17, 2016

Mr. Chase-Daniel moved to approve the minutes as presented, second by Ms. Peer, motion carried by unanimous voice vote.

5. Reports and Project Updates
a) Ignite and Pilot Purchase Program
Ms. Garcia y Griego informed the committee that the response has been very positive. Mr. Tennyson said that he has received many calls with questions on this program. It is intriguing to the public and very exciting. The ideas presented have been very creative. Ms. Garcia y Griego will be in contact with the committee members to create a review sub-committee for this program.
b) Art on Loan Program Report
The Art on Loan Program is where Artist/Galleries lend art to the city to be placed on city property. Budget restrictions include not being able to provide any transport, installation or insurance. These costs have to be incurred by the artist/gallery. The city does not own the art piece therefore this is the reason behind not being able to provide insurance. One of the options being discussed is to make it an outreach project for the Gallery. When they are consigned to the city there is a different contract agreement as well as potential insurance coverage. As we are ramping up the Gallery Program we are sticking with the 3-months theme shows which may not accommodate the art of loan terms. We would consider this a community based pop up exhibit. Strategic agenda asks that we step up to accommodate the community artists. It does not seem like a feasible time to bring in a new project to the gallery. The City would like to keep the Art Purchase program in tact with the formal agreement and we could offer insurance. Ms. Garcia y Griego said that she feels that more time is needed to research the Art Purchase program.

Mr. Chase-Daniel said he likes the options of the Art on Loan Program vs. actually purchasing more than what we want to have. If the city could provide the installation costs and insurance cost, it would be beneficial.

c) Railyard Art Committee Report
Matthew Chase-Daniel – The Railyard Art Committee has conducted about 4 meetings and they are conducted formally. The American Society of Media Artists – will be the group working on the fence project. Mr. Chase-Daniel gave a brief description of this project. This will bring a lot of people in to town and the project is visible from the street. John Redman, Sculpture has also been invited to put a piece at the Railyard, location to be identified. The Railyard Art Project is supported by the Railyard Stewards and they are applying for funding to provide honorariums for artists who bring art in.

6. Action Items
a) Request for approval of permanent monotype exhibit City Council Chambers
Ms. Garcia y Griego provided historical information from the time the city purchased the College of Santa Fe and part of the acquisition was the art collection. There is a significant collection of monotypes at the College location. The University of Art and Design leases the collection as part of their lease agreement. This collection of mono prints has become burdensome due to lack of storage and retention. In the past they contacted the city in hopes to provide these mono prints for City use in one of our facilities. At a past City Council meeting it was discussed that the mono prints could be used to refresh the City Council chambers. Mr. Rod Lambert and Ms. Lisa Martinez have worked to inventory the monotypes and to review what might fit in to the décor of the council chambers. The proposal is to get them framed, estimates are coming in at about $2,500 which is quite reasonable and includes installation. The City governing body has asked for approval form the Art in Public Places Committee and the Arts Commission. The 10 pieces have not been identified at this time.

Mr. Chase-Daniel moved to approve the permanent monotype exhibit for the City Council Chambers with the recommendation to select a lower amount of images and that they be vibrant and installation be scaled appropriately, second by Ms. Peer, motion carried by unanimous voice vote. 1 in opposition – 5 in favor

A portfolio of pictures was provided for committee review. Ms. Deitch said she cautions the committee and staff in selecting what is going to hang in the chambers. Mr. Vallo said that he would hope the selection is vibrant and the framing and location should be carefully considered. Mr. Vallo feels that it can be a really nice presentation. Mr. Vallo would vote for a lower amount of hangings.

Ms. Garcia y Griego did clarify that everything that is in there now will be removed and the new mono images would be framed and hung appropriately. Ms. Peer also reiterated that it would be an improvement to what is there now.

7. Discussion Items
   • Fire Department – color of the art piece is being discussed.
   • Photo Booth – There was an agreement with Ignite that these are projects that could be seeded in the community.
   • Mr. Muchmore asked Ms. Garcia y Griego about a request he has received from Ignite. Discussion regarding this opportunity will continue off-line in order to assure that all contractual requirements are met.

Adjourn

There being no further business to come before the Art in Public Places Committee, the meeting was adjourned at 5:45 pm.

The relationship that humans have with animals is profound. From our material existence to our spiritual experiences, animals figure prominently in the evolution of the human species. Yet in the modern world, animals can become invisible and humans may easily forget the necessity of our relationship with them. By creating monumental sculptures, I hope to make animals visible and to bring particular species into human consciousness.

My sculptures invite the viewer into a fanciful world, where one may sit underneath a hummingbird, for example. The viewer becomes a participant and forms a relationship with the space. I want to see my work become a prop in a story that visitors to the park are writing. This comes in many forms whether through the imaginative play of children or the Instagram photo op. It is these experiences that come to define the park itself. It is these experiences that complete the artwork for me.

The bird form is very compelling because I am inspired by nature, but also drawn to a modernist aesthetic. The colors and angles of birds inspire a modernist conversation about form, shape and color. Birds invite the past and the future and thus constitute a kind of language. They are both descendant and ascendant. As descendants of dinosaurs, they represent the past, yet they are ascendant in the sky, representing the future.

My process of layering up metals to create the form gives the work an industrial modernist sensibility. Since much of the metal is also up-cycled, it further retains a postmodern awareness of multiple narratives. "Colossal Hummer" is my third monumental sculpture that attempts to materialize the relationship between our huge carbon footprint and the natural world. By using automobile hoods to create monumental animals, I aim to raise the question of how our lifestyle choices affect other species. Over forty car hoods were sourced from local scrap yards to make Colossal Hummer. This gives the work a further sense of history. The hoods were taken from cars spanning decades and the material has a specific past etched on its surface. This connects the sculpture to unique lives, while at the same time adding up to a particular but broader American cultural legacy.

As a student, I was inspired by folk artists due to their ability to transform mundane materials into something sacred, mind blowing and original. This ethos continues to influence my work today, to defy all logic of the material and transform it into something that has purpose in the world.

Thank you for this opportunity.
Objective: to create spaces of beauty which invite the viewer to connect with a specific space.

Artist's Statement:

As a writer, cabinetmaker, and plastic artist I have for many years, and in many different media, explored the relationship between language and objects. In 2011 I began to experiment with large concrete tiles (15" square), each cast with a single Roman letter, as a flexible and permanent way of installing large inscriptions out of doors.

The first three examples I have included here are intended as installations, two meant to be installed horizontally in a bed of gravel and surrounded by a poured concrete curb, the third installed vertically in a poured concrete stela. I understand the commission is looking for finished pieces, and these three are ready to go. But it is also accurate to say that the art in this case is in the process—in the steel moulds I have fabricated to pour the letters and the process I have worked out—and all proposals could be easily and quickly adapted to the specific requirements of a given site, though prices might have to be adjusted.

The last example is an earlier piece, my first effort at casting concrete letters, and it speaks for itself.

Artist Statement: “I create work that celebrates the delicate nature of paper in museum quality bronze. My compositions emerge from my desire to describe the nature of creativity and, as I see it, the architecture of the soul.

As an artist, I see a piece of paper as a clean slate, white as light, perfect and full of potential. This potential is activated by light and shadow as decisions crease into the surface. Composition emerges through the paper as it documents these decisions, remembering, revealing and recording the experience of creation.

By combining wax and contemporary casting techniques I developed, each piece is cast into bronze and finished with refined patinas that recall aged parchment. Paper planes, origami, crumpled ideas and innovative abstraction are all themes contained within a portfolio that continues to unfold.

I desire that my sculptures uplift, inspire and encourage those with whom I interact and those I may never have the opportunity to meet.”

Artist Statement

My work: I don’t consider my work complete until it can reach out on what I call a ‘collective core level’: visually, emotionally and spiritually. I am most pleased if it bypasses a viewers’ intellect all together, and moves directly down to their heart and soul.

My community: I have been very fortunate to be surrounded and supported by great “teams” of people: at my gallery, Indigo; at my foundry, Rusty Mesa; at my printers, High Desert Arts; at my framers, Justin’s Frame Design; at my rock suppliers, Range West and New Mexico Stone; and my all around reliable artist suppliers, Artisans.

I am proud to receive all my business services with suppliers, artists and artisans in the Santa Fe area exclusively.

A Master Re-emerges

World-class sculptor Milton He bald is Santa Fe’s secret treasure.

Having lived and worked in Rome for over 40 years, the internationally renowned American sculptor, Milton Elting He bald, returned to the United States in 2004 at age 87. His work which is on display at the Pushkin Gallery in Santa Fe represents an incomparable opportunity to view “one of the most important living figurative sculptors in the world,” in the words of Kenneth Pushkin.

It was during Santa Fe’s renowned “Russian Summer,” when Pushkin produced the ballet ‘Onegin’ at the Santa Fe Opera that the sculptor approached him after the performance and introduced himself. “He told me that he had just moved here and had a lifetime body of his work in a warehouse south of Santa Fe,” Pushkin relates. Already familiar with He bald’s art, (found in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art and Whitney Museum of American Art in New York, the Guggenheim Museum, the Smithsonian Institution, and numerous other top museums and public sites worldwide), Pushkin was elated to offer representation to the sculptor—and in the process re-introduce American collectors to this artistic treasure.

Milton He bald was born in New York City in 1917, and has said he cannot remember a time when he didn’t already know he was an artist. As a preschool-age boy he used colored chalk to make large-scale drawings on the city’s wide sidewalks, including a likeness of a Fifth Avenue double-decker bus, drawn from life. But it was at about age eight that his connection with sculpture began. He was given a box of modeling clay in colored strips. He recalls experiencing an immediate resonance with the medium, and his path in life was set.

Even at a young age, He bald and his three sisters enjoyed visiting the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which, he remembers, “I considered my own personal museum.” After recognizing a strong attraction to sculpture, he picked out two of his favorite sculptors living in New York and somehow managed to get himself invited to their studios for a visit. At age 10 he became the youngest student at the Art Students League, where he studied life drawing. At the same time he began taking sculpture classes at the School Art League.

He bald won his first national sculpture competition, a soap carving contest sponsored by Proctor & Gamble, while still in high school. Also during high school he continued his study of sculpture, attending the National Academy of Design and the Beaux-Arts Institute at night. Hungry for classical art instruction that wasn’t available to someone of his family’s means—his father, an immigrant jeweler from Poland, had been killed during a robbery when Milton was six—he constructed his own forms of discipline. Among other things, he studied and meticulously copied reproductions of paintings by the Old Masters in books at the public library.

His first major works were collected by the newly formed Whitney Museum of American Art in 1932 when the artist was only 15 years old. With no doubt about his career of choice, He bald left high school in the middle of his senior year. He secured his first studio, which he was allowed to use rent-free in exchange for showing other lofts to potential tenants. At age 20, he was given his first one-man show. The exhibition was the prize for winning the annual American Artists' Congress competition, and earned enthusiastic critical reviews. At the same time, he became a member of the Sculptors' Guild.

He bald's earliest pieces were sculpted in plaster or wood, since bronze casting was beyond his financial means at the time. Even today, plaster remains his favorite sculptural medium. He builds up and carves it, and then has the work cast in bronze. His bronze portraits, on the other hand, are initially formed in clay or plasticene.

From the start, He bald's artistic expression has focused on the human figure, individually and in groups. His inspiration has come from literature—including Shakespeare, Whitman, and Melville—Greek and Roman mythology, the Bible, and the everyday observation of people around him. While his figures may occasionally be tragic or dark, more often they present a sunny, cheerful, often humorous perspective on life, reinforced by a lively, rhythmic sense of movement and astute use of negative space. As Frank Getlein, He bald's biographer has put it, the sculptor's oeuvre is "an intensely humanizing body of work, each piece is filled with an energy and vision unmoved by artistic fads or the critic's opinion."

A major element of He bald's career has been public commissions, the most visible of these being Zodiac Screen, a row of large bronze zodiac figures on the glass-fronted Pan-American terminal at JFK International Airport in New York. Other prominent public pieces are located in New York's Central Park, the Hague, UN Plaza, Tower Museum in Dublin, AIG Building in Tokyo, TWA Building in Los Angeles, Tel Aviv Museum, Oslo University in Norway, Yale University, Sun Times Building in Chicago, and many more. Perhaps one of his most famous works is a life-size memorial portrait of James Joyce, installed at the writer's gravesite in Zurich, Switzerland.

It was one of He bald's earliest large-scale commissioned works that first took him to Rome, where the piece was cast at one of the world's most respected foundries. He soon entered and won the Prix de Rome (the first of three times he earned the coveted award), granting him a lengthy stay. The sculptor and his wife, the late Cecile Rosner, fell in love with Rome. Together they built a beautiful villa on the hilly shores of Lake Bracciano (30 km north of Rome) as well as an expansive studio. There they lived, worked and entertained the most famous artists and celebrities of the era.

Acclaimed by critics as the spiritual heir of Auguste Rodin, He bald's long, successful career has shown him to be "the modern master of the figure," Pushkin notes. The sculptor's innate knowledge of anatomy, combined with a high level of technical facility and emotional sensitivity, puts him on a level that is "unparalleled in contemporary figurative sculpture," the gallery owner asserts, adding, "He deserves the great tribute that is coming his way."

Nicholas Herrera has worked throughout his life, beginning at a young age to develop, achieve and maintain his career as a renowned artist. His artistic abilities are diverse and each piece speaks of a spiritual nature that transcends traditional religion. Nicholas has many life accomplishments with worldwide recognition. His art is featured in over 30 museums worldwide, including the Smithsonian American Art Museum. Nicholas has also been referenced or written about in hundreds of books and publications including two biographies, Nicholas Herrera: Visions of My Heart and High Riders, Saints and Death Cars: A Life Saved by Art. He has also received numerous awards and recognition, including the 2006 Award of Distinction from the Folk Art Society of America.

Nicholas has a rich history of supporting and helping others find their own artistic path and to give back to the community. From teaching small school children and troubled teens how to make retablos, to galvanizing a group of artists to create an altar screen for a renovated church, Nicholas has developed his craft fully. His inherent talent and natural need to create, reveal a deep connection to his past. Nicholas has taught children’s workshops through the Spanish Colonial Art Society, the Folk Art Museum in Santa Fe, the Chicano Arts Festival in Denver and at the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum in Los Angeles, among others. Through the years, Nicholas has provided many free seminars and lectures at public libraries, area schools, museums and churches. Not only has he opened his home to the local youth through residential apprenticeships, Nicholas frequently shares his story, art, culture and heritage with international, national and local visitors. Nicholas is still truly a New Mexican “village” artist, residing in the community he grew up in, living on his family’s land in close proximity to the people and places he is a part of.

Nicholas has donated countless pieces of art so that organizations, nonprofits and public programs as well as personal friends in need, may benefit by the sale or auctioning of his artwork. He has made numerous donations to museums worldwide as an effort to unify people and cultures. He continues to assist the local moradas and churches with restorations and renovations of religious artwork.

Through the use of wood, natural pigments and mixed media, Nicholas has exhibited his artwork both locally and nationally that reflect the heritage of traditional santero art and addresses important contemporary social and political views. His strong personality and his independent spirit determine his powerful paintings and sculptures that depict, aside from the religious icons of his Catholic faith, images of the hardship of rural life, the demons of drugs and alcohol, the horrors of war and terrorism. Most recently his controversial artwork was included in acclaimed shows at the University of New Mexico, “El Agua Es Vida: Acequias in New Mexico” and “Necessary Force: Art in the Police State”.

Dear City of Santa Fe Arts Commission:

I have been representing Nicholas Herrera since 2008 and currently showing his work at EVOKE Contemporary in the Santa Fe Railyard Arts District. We highly recommend his artwork for consideration in the Public Art Purchase Program for the City of Santa Fe.

Nicholas Herrera is a modern santero who carves and paints bultos, retablos, and makes large-scale works from wood and recycled metal, including salvaged automobiles. He is a vato santero, who engages the complex dialectical traditions of the Indian and Hispanic cultures. Nicholas is one of the most important folk artists in the United States. His art is in the permanent collections of over 30 museums, including the Smithsonian American Art Museum and National Museum of American History, the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City, and the Autry National Center in Los Angeles. His work has been exhibited in cities across the United States, as well as in Paris, Rome and Berlin. Nicholas is a 15-generation New Mexican and a self-taught fifth-generation Santero, and most importantly he is compassionate and generous member of the community. Nicholas has volunteered his time to dozens of charitable causes and children's programs throughout the state. He has also made significant donations of his artwork to more than thirty charitable auctions, public libraries and organizations.

Nicholas Herrera is an important New Mexican artist that should be included in the art collection of the City of Santa Fe. Please feel free to contact me with any questions you may have regarding Nicholas Herrera or the artwork being submitted.

Respectfully,

Kathrine Erickson

Attention: The City of Santa Fe Arts Commission

Subject: Response to Art in Public Places: IGNITE Response for Qualifications 16/08/RFQ

To Whom It May Concern,

Earth Care (EC) and accomplished local artist Rick Mobbs seek funding in the amount of $10,000 from the City of Santa Fe’s Ignite Project in order to fund the creation of a “NM in 4 Seasons Educational Mural” that will be used as an interactive tool to engage children, youth, and adult community members on the Southside of Santa Fe with images and lessons about the ecological systems and agrICULTURAL traditions that make life possible in the upper Rio Grande region that we call home. The 15 x 20 foot mural will be located on the exterior eastern wall of the City of Santa Fe’s Zona Del Sol building which Earth Care currently occupies along with the Santa Fe Boys and Girls Club. The wall is located inside the Youth & Community Garden that features vegetable and native garden beds, rainwater catchment, composting, and season extension models developed and managed by Earth Care. The garden space is open to the public to explore and learn from informally but also provides an important outdoor classroom for hands-on learning for hundreds of area school children on service trips to the garden, youth participants, and community gardeners through Earth Care’s and the Boys and Girls Club programs.

The mural, designed through a series of co-creative workshops engaging children, youth, community members, and contributing artists, will be an integral tool for the educational garden curriculum that will help facilitate lessons about soil, water, local plants and animals, and other natural systems as well as strategies for sustainable living including organic food production, backyard wildlife habitat creation, soil restoration, and water conservation and management.

To accompany the mural, an interpretive brochure will be designed and printed that will give narrative to the images in the mural and help viewers engage with the ecological and cultural lessons portrayed within. Copies of the brochure will be available in a weatherproof distribution box on the fence of the garden – making them available to viewers all year round. Individual lessons will be developed around images featured in the mural – such as the water cycle, or seed germination, and a large wall-sized print of the mural will enable Earth Care to take these lessons into our partner classrooms at public elementary schools where we offer our outreach environmental stewardship & garden education to over 1,000 students annually.

In addition to direct educational programming, thousands of members of the public will engage with the mural informally as they move through the public space on the corner of Jaguar and Country Club across from the Southside Library.

The lead artist for the project is painter Rick Mobbs who is a professional set designer and who has been painting murals and wall-size pieces for over 30 years. Rick is also an experienced educator. Rick will lead workshops with Earth Care’s professional staff who have been providing Santa Fe children, youth, and community members with high quality ecological literacy and sustainability education for 15 years.
Project Description

that describes the projects project, its location and how the work will be completed. You may include up to two additional image only pages that help to demonstrate the proposed project.

SUMMARY: A 15 x 20 foot mural called “NM in 4 Seasons” that depicts key cycles in nature, flora and fauna of the upper rio grande region, and the life zones of this region as well as agricULTURAL traditions of NM to be used as an interactive educational tool serving the Tierra Contenta neighborhood as well as children, youth, and community members participating in programs at the City’s Zona Del Sol site or through Earth Care’s programs.

LOCATION: The mural will be located on the exterior eastern wall of the City of Santa Fe’s Zona Del Sol building on the corner of Jaguar and Country Club across from the Southside Library in the Youth & Community Garden space developed and maintained by Earth Care.

PROCESS: The mural’s development will include a series of six workshops in May and June 2016 that will engage local children, youth, and community members as well as local contributing artists in the creation of images for inclusion in the mural’s design as well as the execution of the mural’s installation. Two key groups that will be engaged in the process are Earth Care’s Food Justice & Environmental Stewardship Cadre (a group of 25 young adults and high school youth who are serving a one year term to help the community advance food access, sustainable agriculture, and environmental stewardship priorities), and the 65 expected participants in the Boys and Girls Club summer school program who will be participating in weekly garden programming through a partnership with Earth Care.

Three of the workshops will be open to the public, scheduled on the weekend with outreach conducted through canvassing in the neighborhood and bilingual flyers. Local artists will also be invited to participate and/or submit specific images for inclusion in the mural.

Workshops will include ecological literacy activities with Earth Care staff and creative design & drawing activities led by Rick Mopps. Participants will be supported in creating images of NM flora and fauna, lifecycles, lifezones, and local agricULTURAL symbols to include in the murals design. The images created by participants, will be woven into the educational design developed by EC staff using their ecological expertise, and the visual layout design developed by lead artist Rick Mopps, using his expertise in visual art. Once installed, the mural will be photographed and a wall-size poster will be printed for off-site use and the accompanying educational brochure, that references images from the mural for specific ecological lessons will be designed and printed by Earth Care communications staff.

IMPACT: Educational programming using the mural as a teaching tool will serve more than 1,000 participants annually through Earth Care’s programming on-site with children & youth programs offered at Zona Del Sol, community gardening programming for adults, and off-site programming with the portable mural at partner schools. The site of the mural is within one block of two bus stops and across from the Southside library and experiences heavy pedestrian traffic as well as car traffic. Several thousand members of the public will be able to view and learn from the mural annually.
Proposal Narrative

UNIQUE AND INNOVATIVE APPROACH TO PUBLIC ART
This project has a unique approach to public art in that it draws on the tradition of mural-making as a tool to engage the public in reflection and discourse around collectively significant ideas and images, but takes that process a step further by incorporating the mural into formal educational programming for local children, youth, and community members. Just as the garden serves as a rich environment for real-world learning about ecology and sustainability, the NM in 4 Seasons mural will enhance the outdoor classroom at the City's Zona Del Sol site and serve as a teaching apparatus as students learn in a new way about the world that surrounds them and how to care for it. The lessons in the mural will be brought to life and EXPERIENCED by students through their engagement in the garden and in this way, the mural and the garden are mutually reinforcing elements of a transformative educational process that is meant to not only convey information and knowledge, but is designed to activate the senses, serve different learning styles, and be geared toward actual application as students learn how to be better stewards of the place they call home.

By creating a portable print of the mural and the accompanying educational brochure, this project creates a teaching tool that can be taken into the Santa Fe Public Schools where Earth Care and others host school garden and sustainability education programming.

Though the content focus is different, this project is modeled after the Beehive Design Collective's www.beehivedesigncollective.org development of large-scale visual art pieces that give visual expression to the stories of the global justice movement and then provide tools for learning as they are taken into classrooms, meetings, and public gatherings throughout the world.

The project is designed as a collaborative process – engaging the community throughout the process with an emphasis on building in the contribution of local children and youth through partnership with Earth Care's program participants as well as participants in the Boys and Girls Club summer program.

CHOICE OF ARTIST
The artistic design process requires knowledge of how to teach about ecological concepts, knowledge of the ecological concepts themselves, and then an ability to translate those concepts into engaging, evocative, and aesthetically effective imagery. These requirements are what make Earth Care and Rick Mobbs especially suited to lead the project. Earth Care has the expertise to design the content and support community members' in their ecological learning in order to facilitate their contribution to the mural's design. Rick has extensive experience as a set designer/painter working with set directors who have a concept and need the concept translated into visual form. Further, Rick's personal art work combines figurative drawing with colorful, imaginative, and story-like imagery that will enable the many images generated by participants and required for the educational content to be woven together in a beautiful and inviting way.

BUDGET
The budget for this project is largely ($7,500) dedicated to compensating the design team and lead artist for their time to research and design the mural, lead the workshops, and complete the mural's installation. The $2,000 in supplies for the project will cover the cost of boards, paint, and sealant for the mural, as well as mounting supplies. $500 in funds will be used to cover the cost of the workshops including the printing costs of flyers and the cost of snacks for the events.

TIMELINE
The research and design for the project will commence at the beginning of May. Workshops will be held with the Food Justice & Environmental Stewardship Cadre as well as summer school participants in the Boys and Girls Club program in June during the week. Weekend workshops open to the larger public will be hosted the last weekend of May and every Saturday in June until the mural is completed.

PARTNERS
The project will engage students from Earth Care’s programs as well as the Santa Fe Boys and Girls Club summer participants. Earth Care will also invite its partners for its Youth and Community Garden including 1Santa Fe, La Familia, NM Homegrown, Earth Care’s partners who participate in service-learning in the garden include Capital High School, Sweeney Elementary, Cesar Chavez, and Ortiz Middle School. Partner schools where Earth Care coordinates a school garden & environmental stewardship programming where the portable mural would regularly be utilized include Amy Biehl, Salazar, El Camino Real, and Nava Elementary.

EXPERIENCE ENGAGING COMMUNITY
This project is designed to have a significant impact on the community not only by directly engaging children, youth, and community members with lessons in sustainability, local ecology, and public art through the mural’s creation, but by engaging them in a process of community transformation by inviting them to apply those lessons through service in the garden and as stewards in their own lives. Earth Care specializes in this kind of experiential education with diverse children and youth in the community. This project is an expression of our dedication and focus on children and youth living on the Southside of Santa Fe and the implementation of culturally relevant environmental education and leadership development programming for low-income and underserved community members.

PROJECT TECHNICAL DESIGN AND MAINTENANCE PLAN
The mural will be painted using high quality exterior acrylic paint on 6 treated boards that will be primed and sealed for extended outdoor life. By painting the mural on boards, it will be easier to maintain the mural in the case that the building needs to be repainted. The mural is sized for visibility from the road as well as readability when inside the garden space. The accompanying interpretive brochure available from the sidewalk will enable all viewers to benefit from the educational lessons depicted. The wall-sized poster print will enable the mural to benefit students beyond those served on-site.

ALIGNMENT WITH POLICY PLANK
This project aligns with all three of the Santa Fe Art Commission’s policy planks. The project will increase the public’s engagement in a public space – namely the City’s Zona Del Sol building and site. The mural’s placement in the Youth & Community Garden on the corner of Jaguar and Country Club will provide a beautiful public art piece in the neighborhood that has educational as well as aesthetic value and will invite community members to interact with the site. The process for the piece’s development as well as the mural and mural mobile print will directly engage children and youth through Earth Care’s and the Boys and Girls Club programs on-site and at partner schools. All participants and viewers will be engaged with art as a tool for storytelling, learning, and interaction.
Key Artist/Partner bios

Rick Mobbs, Project Artistic Director and Lead Artist

Rick was born in Pinehurst, NC. He is a painter, writer and sculptor. His works are colorful, narrative, imaginative and poetic. He studied at the Vesper George School of Illustration and Design and the Museum School, in Boston, Mass. He has a BS in Art Therapy from Lesley College in Cambridge, Mass. He trained in the studio of Robert Cormier, the Director of the Guild of Boston Artists and later spent two years in the MFA Studio Arts program at ECU in Greenville, NC. For the past 10 years he has been living and working in NM, and has shown work in Montezuma, Las Vegas and Santa Fe.

He has extensive mural and backdrop experience as well as teaching experience. He assisted blind artists in Boston, Mass, helping them hang their work in Boston City Hall. He also taught art to Quaker children in his South End studio there. In North Carolina he opened his 25,000 sq. ft. studio to other artists for figure drawing workshops and other collaborations which ultimately led to out of town group shows, the founding of the recurring “Full Moon Art, Music, and Performance Shows” held across the Historic Downtown, Wilmington, NC. Meetings and workshops in his Wilmington studio led directly to the formation of the ACME Artists and the collective purchase of a 10,000 sq. ft. warehouse which became the ACME ART studios, still active today.

He worked with the neighborhood children who wandered into his studio and, at irregular intervals, when finishing a movie and finding himself with leftover Paint Dept. supplies, he would allow them to paint his old Ford work van.

While in North Carolina he volunteered his artistic skills to Grassroots Leadership, a Charlotte, NC based non-profit (grassrootsleadership.org), and, with his wife, Naomi Swinton, purchased a turn-of-the-century brick firehouse in a cast-away part of the Wilmington, NC, historic downtown, and used it as an incubator for local non-profits, the most successful of which being Working Films (workingfilms.org) which now has international reach and influence.

In New Mexico he assisted Colin Lanham, the Art instructor at United World College and continues to work with high school students there. He helped found the local cold weather shelter in Las Vegas, NM, and volunteered there. He worked with other local artists on the large mural in downtown Las Vegas, NM.

Since moving to Santa Fe he continues to keep his studio open to children and young adults.

He has worked as the head painter, lead scenic artist or crew member for some 80 films. He has worked as well as an art director, production illustrator, storyboard artist or sculptor on many other feature films, TV movies, pilots, episodes and commercials. Highlights of his film credits include

Whisky, Tango, Foxtrot - Foreman, Paint Department
Longmire - Scenic Artist
Breaking Bad - Storyboard Artist for "Dead Freight", the Season 5 train robbery episode
Bless Me Ultima - Scenic Artist
Muppets from Space - Scenic Artist in charge of executing all backdrops, including 26,000 sq. ft. main stage backdrop

Elmo in Grouchland - Opening sequence storyboards, scenic artist, painted chairs for Kermit, Miss Piggy, etc.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles 2 – Costume Illustrations

The Notebook - Storyboard Artist

Throughout 25 years of film experience he has also maintained his own studio and produced his own creative work. He lives with his wife and three children in Santa Fe.

Rick is represented locally by Tito's Gallery. Between movies he works in his studio in Santa Fe on Camino Alire and in the Highlands University foundry in Las Vegas, NM.

Earth Care, Project Host and Educational Content Design

Earth Care was founded in 2001 to educate and empower youth (and adult allies) to create a thriving, just, and sustainable world. In order to achieve this mission, Earth Care focuses on bringing sustainability education into both school and community contexts in Santa Fe, New Mexico and developing young leaders who are equipped with the skills, knowledge, and experience necessary to create lasting change in their communities. Earth Care has a history of making significant contributions to the community and the lives of young people in Santa Fe through innovative programs that bridge schools to the community, encourage leadership, civic engagement, cross-cultural understanding, and environmental regeneration. Earth Care is unique in its work to create avenues for youth participation in civil society and grassroots movements, on City advisory boards and task forces, at conferences and events, and among their peers. We strive to make education more relevant and motivating for young people by engaging them in community action.

Earth Care engages 4,000 youth and community members annually with environmental stewardship education and services that create positive change in the community, with a focus on the local food system, through our partnership with the Santa Fe Public Schools and over 20 youth, adults, and community organizations with our services.

Earth Care staff, who are professional experiential education facilitators with backgrounds in ecology and sustainability, will coordinate the project as well as design the educational content for the mural. Earth Care staff will also co-facilitate the workshops with Rick in order to equip participants with the ecological knowledge they need to contribute meaningfully to the mural’s content. Earth Care will also provide the avenue, through our ongoing programming, to ensure that the NM in 4 Seasons mural achieves its community engagement and educational aims.

A CURATED BICYCLE SOLUTION

Proposal for Ignite | Niomi Fawn
February 29, 2016

City of Santa Fe Arts Commission
ATTN: Ignite
201 West Marcy St.
Santa Fe, NM 87501

Dear Ms. Garcia y Griego and Mr. Tennyson:

This project is inspired by need, opportunity, and devotion. A few years ago, rumblings about bicycle infrastructure for Santa Fe reached fever pitch over lack of parking options in and around the Plaza. Unfortunately, our historic constraints, limited space, and abysmal policy only confounded traditional process-based solutions to the problem. By assembling an all-star cast of local artists, and rallying them around a functionalist approach, I believe art can deliver where no other individual or agency could, and render it beautifully.

Art as urban architecture stands in defiance of Santa Fe's fine art norms, admittedly, but the Ignite grant offers an alluring escape from the status quo. In that spirit, I have selected not only nationally- and internationally-successful individuals to participate, but those who represent an honest cross-section of our local art scene: Chicano, Native, man, woman, trans, queer, military, blue-collar and many points between to engage and serve downtown through a right-scale installation of fine art bike hitches. Each HITCH is a discreet sculptural object erected around our ubiquitous downtown coin-op parking meters; as installed, this new landscape's image and utility activates some of our most well-worn public spaces.

Though form and function obviously bring this proposal to the table, the undercurrent of the project is my sincere love and appreciation for the City Different; I consider it a privilege to make art with these amazing people in our community, and an imperative to leave a responsible legacy of our collaboration in the town we all affectionately call home.

With gratitude for your time and attention,

Niomi Fawn
Artist/Curator of HITCH

Project Description:

The project includes a total of 10 metal pipe "sleeve" assemblies with closed-loop arms engineered to slip over the top of parking meter support poles to allow a secure connection for bike locks. Sleeves will be powder-coated to protect against the elements and then treated as discreet sites for curating an image-based show on their long, lean, circumferences. Each sleeve includes a large set screw to allow it to be mechanically snugged to the existing meter pole, so it won’t spin freely. The final presentation requires no alteration of meter function, nor will it impede access or damage the integrity of that system. Our installation serves essentially as several metal slip covers over the existing, embedded meter pipes.

Though the 10 sleeves are identical in design and fabrication, surface artworks are distinctive to each participating artist. 10 local artists have been hand-selected by Niomi Fawn on both merit and voice. Their respective individual pieces will be specified and engineered to fit the scale of each sleeve assembly, and printed on UV-treated vinyl, then affixed and sealed, forming a durable, decorative spire. These colorful cylinders will interface delightfully with the dominant mud-tones of the Plaza. (Images on the continued support pages are helpful for providing a better visual reference.)

Materials were vetted for their ability to perform urban utility function, and for their availability. Fortunately, we can keep purchases and services local by selecting powder coating, vinyl print, bulk metal, and all welding operations from within city limits. Artists are based in town, as well, and have special insight and imaginative commentary to lend the enhancement of our beloved epicenter.

Additionally, since the project hinges on city planning and accessorizing downtown infrastructure, we consulted Eric Aune (Transportation Planner at the Santa Fe Metropolitan Planning Office) at length for targeted expertise and his experience installing dedicated motorless parking solutions, advice on how to implement the City's Bicycle Master Plan in the scope of this project, and for general research and document support. Eric's office provided a pictorial audit of "the good, the bad, and the ugly" bike parking conditions in the area we are specifying, and introduced us to Noel Correia, Parking Division Director, who was able to gauge the viability of HITCH against his departmental obligations to operate and collect from the meters. We have secured both Eric and Noel's support for this initiative.

Proposal Narrative:

Prophetic critics and artists should be exemplars of what it means to be intellectual freedom fighters, that is, cultural workers who instantaneously position themselves within (or alongside) the mainstream while clearly aligned with groups who vow to keep alive the traditions of critique and resistance. — Cornel West

HiTCH offers a unique opportunity to analyze decorative art against urban design and arrive at a highly-curated, ultra-inclusive solution to bike parking encompassing historic downtown Santa Fe. Nomi Fawn selected specific local artists and agents-of-change to ignite sites of diversity, utility, and beauty through innovative metal fabrication and surface treatment to arrive at a right-scale installation of individual, functional metal sculptures which describe the intersection of history, identity, and culture in the contemporary reality of the Plaza.

HiTCH provides situated learning and visual engagements for all downtown visitors through clever disruption of the ugly necessities that are essentially the weeds of our municipal existence, while providing service for cyclists where the city itself cannot. Since each hitch features one of many, diverse local artists’ voices, the caliber of collaboration activates the Plaza footprint artistically. HiTCH marries logic, imagination, intuition, and systemic reasoning, to explore possibilities of what could be, and creates desirable outcomes that benefit all of our end users.

Artists involved include: Frank Buffalo Hyde, Henry Marks, Eliza Lutz (of Matron Records), Sandra Wang and Crockett Bodelson (of SCUBA), Israel Lopez, Brandon Behning (of Meow Wolf), Greg Scargall, Nomi Fawn (founding member of Hydra Collective and former member of Meow Wolf), rebekah tarín, and Artemis Jones (Hydra Collective). Achievements of these individuals include: residencies at Santa Fe Art Institute and New Mexico State University; shows in Japan, Spain, the UK, and Comic-Con, San Diego; large-scale installations in New York, NY, Santa Fe, NM, and Chicago, IL; public art installations in Boulder, CO, Santa Fe, NM, and Vista, CA; murals in Penasco Theater, and bodies of work in the Museum of Contemporary Native Arts and the Smithsonian. Our welder is an Army-trained metal worker from the Ordnance School at Aberdeen Proving Ground, and BFA graduate of the Institute of American Indian Arts.

Designs similar to this type of bike parking amendment co-exist peacefully in many U.S. cities currently, and provide bike transit infrastructure where it was absent or afterthought. Secure bike parking is a challenge in many places that grew up around travel modalities unrelated to cycling. In Santa Fe, the city does not have a clear process or agency responsible for retrofitting appropriate and necessary accommodations for cyclists in its historical areas, thereby creating parking deserts. HITCH proposes to remediate that. Entities in the metropolitan planning and parking divisions were involved in the early design stages, and will assist in the installation of the final pieces when complete.

HITCH addresses the Arts Commission Policy Planks related to Creative Spaces, by activating public space through both creativity and the arts, and Engagement, by facilitating collaborations that encourage participation in the arts by everyone in the community. Our clever presentation of discreet works in tandem with existing city architecture stimulates involvement, reflection, critique, and illustrates the ultimate expression of functionalist aesthetic.

The project continuum involves identifying the design opportunity, conducting research, prototyping, selecting artists, and drafting the proposal. These Phase One activities are all complete as of 29 February. Phase Two begins with notice of award, which launches production of both metal sleeve assemblies and individual artworks, followed by weather-hardening of the sleeves in preparation for receiving their vinyl coats. The last phase of the project is the most dynamic, with digitally rendered art works going to print and the combining of all elements. Installation occurs after the production run of all 10 HITCH pieces is complete, at which point Noel Carreia will facilitate the removal of meter heads to receive each sculpture, and then will inspect and secure the entire installation with a few turns of the HITCH set screw and replacement of the parking meter head.
Key Artists:

Frank Buffalo Hyde

When working on a piece, Frank taps into the universal mind. The collective unconsciousness of the 21st century. Drawing images from advertisements, movies, television, music and politics. Expressing observation, as well as knowledge through experience. Overlapping imagery to mimic the way the mind holds information: non linear and without separation. Frank is an IAIA graduate, and his work is in the permanent collections at the Museum of Contemporary Native Art and the Smithsonian’s National Museum of the American Indian. (http://frankbuffalohyde.com/home.html)

Eliza Lutz

Eliza Lutz is a young artist from Santa Fe, NM who is dedicated to living and creating in her hometown. Founder of Matron Records and guitarist/vocalist for acclaimed local acts such as GRYGRDNS, Future Scars and As In We, Lutz is also a graphic artist and designer. Having been raised on the DIY ethos of the local music scene, she grew up creating show posters, silkscreening original merchandise and designing logos for bands and businesses alike. She continues to expand on her graphic work through her new record label and its associated acts, maintaining her passion for playing an active role in the Santa Fe community.

Sandra Wang and Crockett Bodelson

Sandra and Crockett moved from San Francisco to Santa Fe in 2011. Soon after, they started the experimental artspace, Caldera, with friend, Chris Brodsky. They ran a pirate radio station, hosted a webcast lecture on bees, transformed their parking lot into a junky beach, organized drive-in movies and live music shows in the process of developing the local scene. They were featured in the Alcove Shows at the New Mexico Museum of Art, and at CCA in a biodiesel van. (http://www.drawingwhiledriving.com/)

Niomi Fawn

Niomi Fawn is a queer artist currently living in Santa Fe, New Mexico. She has been applying the theory of neo-pastiche technique on a wide scale – moving her medium into a third dimension and blurring the boundaries that too often separate art and audience. Her latest works involve the creation of objects, informed but not limited by neo-pastiche, which are placed in natural and constructed environments, gradually transforming the surroundings and fuzzing the lines between the artistic and non-artistic worlds. Niomi was a formative member of Meow Wolf, current founder of Hydra Collective, and artist/curator for this project. She has shown work at BMoCA in Boulder, CO; Flux Factory in New York, NY; was a key artist in The Due Return installation at CCA, Santa Fe, NM; and an installation artist-in-residence at NMSU. Brandon Behning

Brandon Behning was born in Alpena Michigan in 1982. He attended Kendall College of Art & Design intermittently until moving to Santa Fe, NM, in 2007. As a spectacular creative force; he has developed a highly refined (if not always so specific) aesthetic vocabulary. Brandon’s work consists of frenetic qualities and teeters on the edge, making use of idiosyncratic abandoned materials, like unto a sort of ghetto Richard Tuttle, yet ultimately a successful balance of the cautious and chaotic. Brandon’s work is showcased in the new Meow Wolf venture, The Eternal Return, and has traveled to shows in Dallas, New Orleans, and New York.
Henry Marks is a photographer/Illustrator/designer based in Santa Fe. He's also a cyclist who has driven a bike taxi (pedicab) in downtown Santa Fe for the past two summers specifically to get a better perspective of Santa Fe architecture and history; cataloging a body of glass photos of modern historical landmarks and society in the process. Henry is strangely often commissioned to illustrate birthday cakes. With a professional background as an explosives expert, he hopes to someday combine explosives and birthday cake into something temporary but satisfying.

Israel F. Haros Lopes is a Chicano artist from East Los Angeles, who studied English and and Chicano Studies at UC Berkeley. He received his M.F.A. from California College of the Arts. His work is an attempt to search for personal truths and histories inside of cosmology through symbolism involving pre-Columbian Northern and Southern America. The work, written and painted, is attempting to mark and remark historical points in America and the world-at-large. The mark-making attempts to speak to the undeniable presence of Native America, not only within the written context of this continent, but a borderless Turtle Island; it is an individual remembering of ancestral, spiritual and political borderless truth and an attempt to help others access their own histories and herstories.

rebekah tarin is a Northeast LA born Xicana, self-taught critical thinker and artist believing in the transformative power of creative expression. As a gender non-conforming queer, my existence is a shape-shift across landscapes of Xicanisima, queerness, parenthood, feminism, divinity and other liberatory processes. Passionately working for the past 13 years to provide empowering artistic experiences to Northern New Mexico youth through the mediums of visual art, writing, physical theatre and puppetry.

U.S. Navy Veteran Gregory Scargall served with the Marine Corps First Wing Division. He currently runs the Veteran's Resource Center at Santa Fe Community College and serves on the New Mexico Council for the Navy League as the Vice President, and in that capacity he oversees collaborative event planning with the nuclear submarine fleet: USS Santa Fe, the USS Albuquerque, and the USS New Mexico. He is also a retired sign shop owner and craftsman from San Clemente, CA. Greg's art has been featured at Comic-Con, San Diego, and he won a commission to install art on electrical receptacle boxes throughout the city of Vista, CA.

Artemis Jones is an IAIA and U.S. Army Ordnance School graduate. She dabbles in trains, gladiatorial contests, firefighting, bike maintenance, and the occasional military deployment. Artemis completed enormous projects related to armor and turret fabrication for combat brigades while stationed in Buehring, Kuwait, and metal-intensive battle damage assessment and repair throughout her various military assignments. Lately, she's been pursuing much more peaceful projects, such as social critique at MoCNA, Santa Fe, and technical art support for Hydra Collective.

Budget Narrative:

The ambition of this installation involves selecting specific materials and finishes to confirm its ability to endure the urban environment. As such, powder coating service and higher cost vinyl application is necessary, though it impacts overall cost. And as a collaborative, tech-intensive exercise, artist fees included the services of a Photoshop expert to help create templates and edits, a curatorial charge, and compensation for 10 individual artists for their proprietary designs. We are asking for an Ignite grant in the full $10,000 amount to cover the majority of these authorized expenses, plus nine hours of installation labor.

Dear Arts Commission

I would like to introduce myself and propose a project for Ignite. I am an artist living in Santa Fe, having moved here in 1996. I am now primarily working in steel sculpture after having spent decades as a painter and making a living designing and building furniture.

I am proposing to build an easily accessible freestanding sculptural form in a south side Santa Fe City Park location, wanting the piece to be an intersection of form, speech, governance, and community. The form itself is a reductive simplification of forms that recur in my pieces. The constructed form itself, to be completed within the Ignite timeframe is only the initiation of the piece, for I want the piece to be a catalyst. Rather than fearing graffiti and wondering how the piece will be maintained, I want the city to permit painting. I envision different cultures to cross-pollinate, for I want the form to be a tableau where anyone with the proper permit, is able to tag/paint the piece. Other than the construction and installation of the form between now and June 30, building the "piece" involves working with the community (city, neighborhood, legal, arts, even taggers) to lay a groundwork, working with a receptive neighborhood.

My final ongoing interaction with the piece is to maintain the right to have my permitted time with the piece once a year. I come from the background of being a painter. With my sculpture, however, I like to build surfaces up and then reduce them. With this piece I would like, after taggers have built up the surfaces, to have a chance to reduce the surfaces-sand scrape, uncover, discover. Their art is usually narrative. My narrative is more about the accident of discovery-more abstract. Ironically, such reduction and removal, is normally part of public art maintenance.

It is not within the scope of my project and proposed budget but I see recording of the transitory works, which will evolve, as a potential project in itself. Photographing the changing works and maintaining an archive and/or site is enticing to me.

Respectfully,
Tom Osgood
Project Description-Ignite- Tom Osgood

I am looking to build a form (a sculpture), which prioritizes reversing the maintenance priority that looms over the discussion of public sculpture by inviting “taggers” into participation and, by so doing, turning the form into a “sculpture”. I am looking to incorporate the culture of those who tag (in this case anyone who wishes to do so), as well as our city governance. I would like to find a receptive community that would engage in the piece and see its benefits.

I am proposing to build a freestanding sculpture in a south side Santa Fe City Park location. The sculpture needs to be a large enough tableau for painting to be prioritized, allowing the painters to be fully engaged.

The piece itself is only to be a catalyst at a location where different cultures cross. While the sculptural form can be simple, it is important that it not be just a wall. Even if only for a moment, the sculpture might give the tagger/s a moment to pause and reflect “Why is this here, what is this, why not a wall?” In addition, the piece is to create an intersection of speech, governance, and community. The tagging culture is associated with “guerilla art”, working below the radar, in defiance of rules. Municipalities often work to defeat or discourage these actions. I want to embrace, to engage these opposing mindsets, while bringing in my personal take as a third leg. The tagging culture intrigues me but I am certainly an ignorant outsider. Importantly, the piece (the form, its evolving surface and the “action” of those working on this evolving work) will be an addition for the surrounding community, a continuing “teaching moment”.

A system has to be created allowing for tagging and over-tagging. I am contacting a nonprofit in Venice Beach, Ca., which works with taggers and maintains tagging walls at Venice Beach. In speaking briefly with them a year and a half ago, I learned that their system requires an easily obtainable permit. I am not sure of the rules or the culture of over-tagging – when and how often it is allowed. I am seeking those answers.

Finally, as my part of the discussion, I would like to reserve the right to have my turn with the sculpture once a year. I come from the background of being a painter. With my sculpture, however, I like to build surfaces up and then reduce them. With this piece I would like, after the taggers have built up the surfaces, to have a chance to reduce the surfaces-sand scrape, uncover, discover. Their art is usually narrative. My narrative is more about the accident of discovery—more abstract.

It is not within the scope of my project and proposed budget but I see recording of the transitory works, which will evolve, as a potential project in itself. Photographing the changing works and maintaining an archive and/or site is enticing to me.
I built this maquette (15X16X14"), as an example for a proposed piece to be 75" high by 80" wide by 64" deep.
Proposal Narrative- Ignite
Tom Osgood

Artistic Excellence- Proposed Artworks
I would be the initial artist involved in building the form. After placement of the form, the “artists” will be the community of those who choose to participate. I propose building the piece in steel, as I believe the rivets and laps add interest both to the form and as a component to the painting. I could also build the form in concrete over a metal armature. The cement would be a suitable substrate for painting but, in my opinion, would lack the refinement. I think the cost of one vs. the other would be a wash. If I do it all the labor myself in steel, it will take longer, which I can absorb, versus doing the piece in concrete, which would require hiring contractors/laborers, and eating up the cost there.
I also think that a steel piece has an inherent value (even if only sold to Capitol Scrap) should you wish to make a future change, whereas a concrete piece is best suited for a sledgehammer.

Artistic Excellence- Past Artworks
Please see images and resume as part of application, for you to decide.
In addition to my sculpture, I worked with clients on many commissions as part of my past career doing high end one of a kind furniture. I have provided one reference, who can attest to my capacity in that area of meeting clients needs and working collaboratively.

Project Feasibility and Logistics
I can, by having done past work and by references, demonstrate my ability to build the project on time and in a sound and safe manner.
I am dependent on working with the City of Santa Fe, artistically and legally, to bring the project to fruition. Doing so is part of the piece itself. I sense a willingness on the city’s part to make it happen but I know that it is new territory. I am more than willing to go the extra distance and work between all the parties (city community and laborers I will need for construction/installation) to be a facilitator if you will.

Suitability
I am looking to construct the form in fabricated steel. I would build the form, with anchors embedded in a concrete foundation, to be hidden by earth, gravel, or grading—both for aesthetic and maintenance reasons. As part of permitting, anyone painting the piece is required to protect and respect the surrounding area, including not getting paint on the ground and in using drop cloths if necessary.
Alignment With policy Plank

I am certainly driven "to make the city a better place for all". I am severely prejudiced in this regard as I believe art is uplifting in intent and in product. This proposal is definitely "community focused" and is innovative, not because of its form but because of turning maintenance predispositions on end, by turning potential cultures in opposition into participants in creation and in edification. I am also intrigued by the prejudice many sculptors have against painting forms (especially "busy" painting) as the belief is that painting breaks down the capacity to view form. This can be a great lab to see what happens.

The piece, in form, is certainly permanent but the piece will only remain so as long as people participate.

I do fail in meeting the "small scale" requirement and cannot compromise on this as I think larger scale is important to success. I am willing to be financially squeezed, at my end, to make it happen.

- I want all people to have access to this piece, should they choose. It is intended to be "welcoming to people of all cultural backgrounds, economic statuses, sexual orientations, gender-identities, ages, and abilities ".
- Should the government work with me in realizing this proposal, they are part of the piece.
- I want rules, permitting, and the underlying mutual respect (at least willingness to be receptive) to be part of the piece. Cooperation is not only a necessity in bringing the piece to fruition. It is a key component.

Sentry is going to be finished with hot dipped galvanization. The piece is constructed of 14 gauge cold rolled steel.
